GOP battles Medicare Board, wants repeal vote in early fall

By Rebecca Adams, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor
July 15, 2011

The work of a commission created by the health overhaul law to find ways to reduce Medicare costs probably won't get under way for two more years. And experts say its decisions won't affect the program for another decade. Somehow though, the Independent Payment Advisory Board, known as IPAB, has become the target of the moment.

Bipartisan push emerges to repeal of over-the-counter drug provision in FSAs, HSAs

By Jane Norman, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor
July 15, 2011

A provision in the healthcare law that has forced consumers who use medical savings and spending accounts to get prescriptions for such common drugs as aspirin and eye drops would be repealed under legislation introduced this week by members from both sides of the aisle in both chambers.
